Bunnings is not the only major retailer to close in Queensland on April 25, with Kmart closing all shops and Woolworths, ALDI and Coles closing most stores throughout the state. Anzac Day is one of the four public holidays that the main retailers must close, according to the rules of the Queensland government. With dogs now admitted only in shops all over the country in muzzle and leashes, or brought in the arms of their owners, after a child has been reported a Jack Russell terrier, the company's protocol was marked a knee-jerk reaction to an isolated incident. However, Bunnings says that his political review has taken feedback from customers and staff. Photo: Patrick Scala [dm-listing-recommendation experimentname='midcontent'] "It's a shame, but there's no reason to change the rules surrounding dogs allowed in Bunnings," says Clinton Cole, the director of Sydney's designer company CplusC Architectural Workshop, who has always allowed dogs to enter his workplace. "Why will you change your policy on the basis of an accident that has happened? I did a huge fuss when I went to Bunnings while my border collie Kayla comes with me everywhere, but she has to sit at Bunnings' door because of their politics. "In the years of dog permission in our offices, we have never had a single accident and I wonder why everyone does not allow them, as it makes a job so much more relaxing and enjoyable." The border collie Kayla goes everywhere with owner Clinton Cole, but now it has to sit at the door of Bunnings. Photo: Clinton Cole / Twitter It is a similar story for a single trader in the same industry as Bunnings. Peter Carroll, the owner of Darlinghurst's Hardware that allowed dogs in the store since his birth in 1923, never had a problem. "They are always welcome in our store until they bite or do their job in the store," he says. "The two have never happened, as far as I know." And animal behaviorist Dr Kersti Seksel, of the Sydney Animal Behavior Service, believes that problems usually come from human behavior rather than from that of any animal. "With well behaved and socialized dogs in public, there will be no problems," he says. "But it is adults who teach children to ask forthe owners of dogs before trying to pater them to make sure they don't mind. You are sixlike strangers who come to you and caress you in the head and sometimes some dogs don't even do it." The owners of pets welcomed the new Bunnings policy to allow well-kept dogs in the shops. Photo: Michelle Wagsoutwest / Twitter Bunnings formalized a new policy at the beginning of November to allow dogs in their shops. However, a dog reported taking a girl on the leg in a store in Melton, north of Melbourne. Her mother said she tried to deal with the dog. His skin was broken just under his knee that caused bruises and swelling. As a result, Bunnings agreed to pay all medical expenses and then introduced a new dog policy. Michael Schneider, operating director of Bunnings, said this week the company had received a lot of feedback from customers and it is important that we take these opinions on board," said Schneider. "As a result, we decided to review the policy so that pets can only be allowed if they are securely protected in a vehicle [in the section of a store trays], on a lead and wearing a nose, or brought. "A common approach is what people have asked and we hope our revisions have hit the spot." Trolleys for dogs of all sizes in Bunnings. Photos: James Ward /Twitter Assistance animals, of course, are still allowed in Bunnings without conditions. But many strangers have criticized the store for its move, especially at a time when, in many places in Europe and the United States, pets are admitted practically everywhere – in shops, bars, cafes, even on planes. Susie Willis, industry consultantpet, says Bunnings is behind the clock. "Who will put a nose on a dog to go to Bunnings?" he asks. "A well-socialized and well-trained dog on a track should be able to accompany its owner only about anywhere. "Of course, he's busy in Bunnings, but he's busy upmain street where the owners of animals walk their dogs. "Any problem is much more likely to be an inadequate supervision of children's adults. We are teaching children who should ask a pet owner before they approach the pet. "Of course, I'm sorry for the girl in question, but I think the problems. At the Norfolk Hotel in Surry Hills, there has been a pet-friendly policy in the beer garden since it opened five years ago, without reported accidents. "Many people have pets in Surry Hills and their dogs are well cared for, so why not let them in?" said spokesman Bridget Sullivan. "We never had a problem. People often even call to make a reservation for the beer garden for themselves and their pet. "If people have an unfriendly dog, then they wouldn't bring them here." A sausage is tempting for this canine visitor of Bunnings. Photo: Sophie Caruana / Twitter It is the same story as the most important pet-friendly hotel in Sydney The Langham, on Kent Street in the Rocks. Pets are allowed to stay in rooms or suites until they are under 20kg. Pets cannot be left alone at any time and must also be in advantage in public areas. The hotel has a water bowl on the front for pets and passersby, and offers additional services for pets, including walking and pet-sitting. Animals are welcome at Langham. Photos: The Langham, London / Twitter Every pet receives a Langham branded bed, a welcome pet kit and a water bowl to usetheir stay, as well as a menu for dedicated animals for both cats and dogs, similar to room service. "We are excited to be able to manage the only luxury program for sydney hotel animals, which is more similar to cities such as New York and Paris, where pets are warmly welcomed in hotels as valuable family members," he said. Sonia Lefevre. "Our staff and guests love the unique touch Sydneysiders can bring pets to the hotel and often refer to the program as a very international one, which fits a cosmopolitan city like Sydney."
